PORTRAIT PROCEDURE AND FEE SCHEDULE

Elizabeth Schott works from life or if sitters do not wish to schedule long session times for painting, she will work from photographs that she takes of her subjects.

Once a decision is made to have a portrait done, questions of clothing, setting and where the portrait will ultimately be displayed are considered, this can be done by phone or a personal meeting before the photo session.

Photo sessions last approximately one hour, during which as many as one hundred photos are taken. In the case of young children or busy executives, a shorter photo session may be held if desired. A 40% non-refundable deposit is required at this time. Elizabeth makes the final decision of reference to be used, but the clients input is always welcomed. The client will have final approval of the composition before the painting proceeds.

Under no circumstances will the reference photographs be released or sold.

Delivery of the painting can vary based on size, medium, work load and weather. Elizabeth tries to accommodate special occasions so let her know if this is an issue.
